

Head for Art

The Learning to Look at Paintings tour

This tour is all about opening windows onto the world of art. Over the course of one morning, you will learn to look at and understand an image by analysing how it works, what its pictorial elements are and how they relate to each other.

Learning to Look at Paintings takes six great works in the National Gallery. Through these, we explore the different ingredients of composition, space, form, tone and colour before finishing with the importance of subject matter.

Learning to Look at Paintings is one of Head for Art's most popular tours. Structured for clarity and maximum enjoyment, this is a visit that will open your eyes to the real magic of paintings.

Where and when

Head for Art runs this tour by appointment as well as on the first Saturday of every month

Saturday 3 March 2007

Saturday 7 April 2007

The tour begins at 10:30 and runs until 13:30, with a coffee break mid-morning

The tour takes place at the National Gallery, Trafalgar Square, London WC2

The tour meets at the entrance to the Sainsbury Wing of the Gallery at 10:25

Price

£30.00 per person

To book a place

Either email Aleid Ford at aleid@headforart.com or call to book on 07736 668 734